Ladak

it is mainly patrilineal descent which is observed in Ladak although 582 611 614 [184]
(there exist patrilineal clans here, as in Lahul, called p'ha-spun (P'ha-sPun), of which I shall speak later), dual descent is taken into consideration in what concerns degrees of marriage prohibition. Thus one can never marry within the paternal clan, and only a blood relative of one's mother beyond the seventh degree of relationship. In the poorer classes it is said that such a prohibition is only observed up to the fifth degree.

The wedding ceremonies of the well-to-do Ladaki families are most elaborate and spectacular. In more modest households, however, chang is simply offered three or four times to the bride's relatives after Tri-chang in what is called Bsu-chang (bSu-ch'hang) or "taking-home-chang", and on the day fixed for the wedding, the bridegroom's (eldest) father, azhang or maternal uncle and some of the members of his p'ha-spun escort the girl to his house and the main ceremony follows. This is similar to the equivalent ceremony among the wealthier people, which I now propose to describe in greater detail. 585

We should first distinguish between bag-ma and mag-pa marriage, and since the former of the two is the most elaborate, I shall take it first. Before the commencement of the principal ceremonies, and after the formalities following upon the Go-ras ritual have taken place, a feast called Drags-chang (Drags-ch'hang) or "very much chang" is given to the bride's parents by their relatives. They bring tsampa, chang, sheep and goat carcasses, tea, butter, rice and cash to help them with the occasion. The same kind of feast is held in the bridegroom's house for his (or their) parents by the latters' relatives.

Then the first phase of the wedding festivities begins. On the date decided upon, a procession is formed at the bridegroom's house. It consists of his father, his azhang, members of his p'ha-spun, fifteen to twenty in number. It never includes the boy himself, who stays at home and waits. Towards the close of day, all these people will set out accompanied by a dancing party, gorgeously dressed, of five to nine Nya-opas (gNya-bo-pa) or "witnesses". These, chosen among the friends and companions of the bridegroom, are designated by astrology; their principal qualification is that they know the appropriate dance steps and songs to be sung. They are led by a Nya-pön (gNya-dPon) or "chief witness". [535] [187]

As they proceed towards the bride's house, they are offered chang and tsampa on the way by anyone who cares to come along from the village. They take these offerings in their hands as blessings of good luck, and in return pay out cash in small coins. Some distance from
